this collection of essays aims to widen the current critique on borders by examining their entanglements with constructions of identity and disciplinary categories in particular it calls into question established models of gender notions of narrative genres and typological genera of borders in today s literary artistic philosophical and socio political discourse the chapters interrogate boundaries and boundary crossing not only in terms of geographical frontiers and the physical acts of trespassing but also as discursive constructs that police crossing subjects as gendered subjects on the one hand and identify artistic genres and academic disciplines as fixed sealed in ways of understanding the world on the other taking inspiration from the multiple meanings of the italian word genere which stands for gender genre and typology genus simultaneously the volume reflects on the gendered narrative and typological nature of borders and border imagery and on the significance and potentialities of crossover phenomena taking place in borderlands in the fields of arts literature anthropology sociology and philosophy this collection aims to renew our perspective on adaptation and intermedial processes by thinking of them in terms of codes rather than media as a result the notion of transcodification emerges as a crucial tool in order to study the circulation of semiotic and aesthetic resources across disciplines knowledge systems and cultures defined as the transfer of meaning making potential from one semiotic domain to another transcodification both includes and transcends intermediality thus dramatically expanding the scope and research potential of adaptation and intermedial studies the essays collected here apply this framework to an incredibly wide variety of objects and issues from the relationship between art and historiography to the visual culture of finance from contemporary approaches to ekphrasis to the hidden labor of screenwriters from modern surveillance to digital comics from fansubbing to the reception of the classical world in the digital age from medieval theater to the role of videogames in the war on terror by fostering dialogue between radically different disciplines the book offers a unique approach to the study of semiotic interrelations across the most diverse aspects of human culture putting the new materialist figure of diffraction to use in a set of readings in which cultural texts are materially read against their contents and their themes against their readers or against other texts this volume proposes a critical intervention into the practice of reading itself in this book reading and reading methodology are probed for their materiality and re considered as being inevitably suspended between or diffracted with both matter and discourse the history of literary and cultural reading including poststructuralism and critical theory is revisited in a new light and opened up for a future in which the world and reading are no longer regarded as conveniently separate spheres but recognized as deeply entangled and intertwined diffractive reading ultimately represents a new reading of reading itself firstly by critiquing the distanced perspective of critical paradigms such as translation and intertextuality in which texts encountered processed or otherwise subdued secondly showing how all literary and cultural readings represent different agential cuts in the world text reader constellation which is always both discursive and material and thirdly the volume materializes dynamizes and politicizes the activity of reading by drawing attention to reading's intervention in and co creation of the world in which we live discourse about crisis is pervasive in the mass media and scholarship and in discussions about the discipline of literary studies contemporary narratives about crisis concern systems and infrastructures on which societies rely this book critically engages with crises as events of excess which surpass containment efforts by governments and institutions as occurrences that generate conflicting discourses meanings and political responses and as entangled with visible and underlying structures infrastructures of crisis concentrates on the evocation of infrastructure in literary and filmic texts about real world events such as nuclear accidents the refugee crisis pandemics and climate change and works across scholarly conversations to examine how a range of cataclysms is figured as well as how cultural products dramatise infrastructures entanglements with neoliberalism and colonialism
